"In our American unity," said President Roosevelt for the nation and all the world to hear Monday afternoon, "we will pursue two obvious and simultaneous courses: We will extend to the opponents of force the material resources of this nation, and, at the same time, we will harness and speed up the use of those resources in order that we ourselves in the Americas may have equipment and training equal to the task of any emergency and every defense."

Second of three articles analyzing Mexico's chances for revolution.

EL PASO, Tex.—After years of quiet the American border is again buzzing with rumors of an impending revolution in Mexico.

Those whispered words, coupled

Gen. Avila Camacho... Genoa administration's choice, with rumors of fifth column activities, have taken a great toll of the tourist business, blacked out of Europe, that might have been expected to flow this year over the magnificent International Highway from Laredo, Tex., to Mexico City.

Many American tourists around Laredo are even afraid to drive their cars across the International bridge which spans the Rio Grande and connects Laredo to Nuevo Laredo on the Mexican side.

Yet for one who saw the first four years of almost continuous Mexican revolutions starting in 1911, who rode with Francisco Madero, with Pancho Villa and with others of those now legendary leaders of the past, it is hard to believe a serious revolution is in prospect.

Stronger Army Deters Revolt
I have just completed a 3000-mile tour of Mexico and cannot report serious organization toward revolt.

There are a number of facts to be considered in connection with any possible Mexican revolution:

1. All the elements upon which the old revolutionary armies of the past were built are no longer in existence.

2. The rich hacienda owners from

Help in Supplies
Means Allied Victory;
Says England

WASHINGTON—(AP)—

The state department announced Tuesday the United States liner Washington with 1,020 passengers enroute from Europe was stopped early Tuesday morning by an unidentified submarine which first ordered abandonment of the ship but later allowed it to proceed.

The liner was on its way from Galway, Ireland, where it picked up additional Americans.

The state department said upon the order to "leave ship" passengers and crew, the liner numbering 570, were ordered to the lifeboats, some of the boats actually being lowered when an order came from the submarine to "please go on."

LONDON—(AP)—President Roosevelt's assurances of material aid from the United States insures an Allied victory in the war against Germany, Clement Attlee told the house of commons in a war report Tuesday.

"From across the Atlantic has come the answer of a great democracy," Attlee said.

Attlee said Roosevelt "virtually inspired the free peoples of Europe."

F. D. R. Congratulated

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Reporting its telegraph wires "swamped" with messages approving President Roosevelt's speech Monday night, the White House announced Tuesday he would reinforce his declaration of material support for the Allies with an immediate request of congress for $50,000,000 for refugee relief.

French Claim Rear Attack on Paris Is Beaten Off — No Word About Italians — Turkey Keeps Eye on Russia

By the Associated Press

Hitler's armies stormed at the gates of Paris Tuesday night, Berlin reported, reaching at one point the Marne river, historic battle field where the French Poilus stopped the Kaiser's rush in 1914.

By the Associated Press

"Destruction" of two entire French armies in the great battle for Paris was reported by informed sources in Berlin Tuesday who said Hitler's mechanized columns are speeding southward to slice France in half and meet Italian troops from the east.

The Nazis estimated the two French armies comprised between 400,000 and 500,000 men.

France's Reynaud Runs All Affairs

Most Powerful Frenchman Since Napoleon III

By WILLIAM MCGAFFIN
AP Feature Service
PARIS — Depper little Paul Reynaud—a sharp-eyed man from the mountains—sits in a big chair in France, wielding more legal power than any Frenchman since Napoleon III.

France picked Reynaud at the zero hour to stop Hitler's changing blitzkriegs. Like Britain's Churchill, he had been sharpshooting France's defense and financial policies through the years.

France found the little fellow was right. France made Reynaud premier—and more. He's almost a one-man cabinet—premier, minister of war and national defense, and foreign minister.

Then came action. In came Generals Weygand and Petain, who believed in beating the enemy to the draw. Out went General Gamelin and others who believed in waiting behind strong defenses. Out, too, a little later, went Daladier, who had been foreign minister after Reynaud succeeded him as premier.

Reynaud's wartime job fits him like his well-tailored clothes and his bowler. He is a military strategist, wrote a book on "the new type of war." He's a financial expert and, thus, holds the confidence of France's big business.

He waited twenty years to be premier. Like Churchill, he was unpopular. One commentator said, "Reynaud's fate is to foresee too soon."

When Hitler began building for war, Reynaud called on France to strengthen the military force.

He urged, in his book, that France prepare, with fleets of planes, tanks and armored cars operating in mass formation.

When the English pound dropped in 1931 Reynaud wanted to devalue the franc, too. He stuck to his guns for five years. Those who had laughed came around to voting for his point of view.

"It is good that it has finally come," said he, "but it comes too late."

Launches 3-Year Plan
French finances went into a desperate decline that stopped only when Reynaud agreed to become finance minister in Daladier's cabinet.

Reynaud, at the start of 1939, launched a three-year plan, so severe it would have cost the head of an ordinary finance minister. In general, he put the government on a "business basis." Gold started flowing back to France. Production increased. Unemployment decreased.

War, eight months later, interrupted the program, but those eight months of effort sent France into the war infinitely stronger.

Then France started spending three times as much as in peace-time. Reynaud's job was to find the money. He did.

He boosted taxes still higher, demanded that those who had money to spare invest it in government war loans. He stifled squawkers by laying his cards on the table, explaining the situation in plain talk.

France's great colonial administrator, the late Marshal Lyautey, was impressed by Reynaud's "clear-headed mountain thinking" when Reynaud was colonial minister.

Free of Party Ties
Reynaud was born sixty-one years ago in the Alpine foothills about Barcelonnette.

Politically he is a sort of Senator Norris. He is a rightist—but has never held himself to party ties.

He loves fast debate, fast driving, fast fencing. He took fencing lessons daily for years.

He lives on the same fashionable street as President Lebrun and Daladier—with his wife and daughter.

Reynaud is a lawyer by profession. Finance and politics, however, have occupied most of his adult life. Always ambitious, he never reflected it so clearly as when he decided to stay on as premier after scraping through a confidence vote with a one-vote majority.

Youngsters Lap Up U. S. History

That Is — After They Have Visited the Capital

By JACK STINNETT
WASHINGTON—The tourist trade of the nation's capital probably compares very favorably with that of California, Colorado, Maine and Minnesota in summer, and Florida in winter—but the most amazing phase of it to any newcomer must certainly be the thousands upon thousands of private school, high school and college youngsters who flock here every spring.

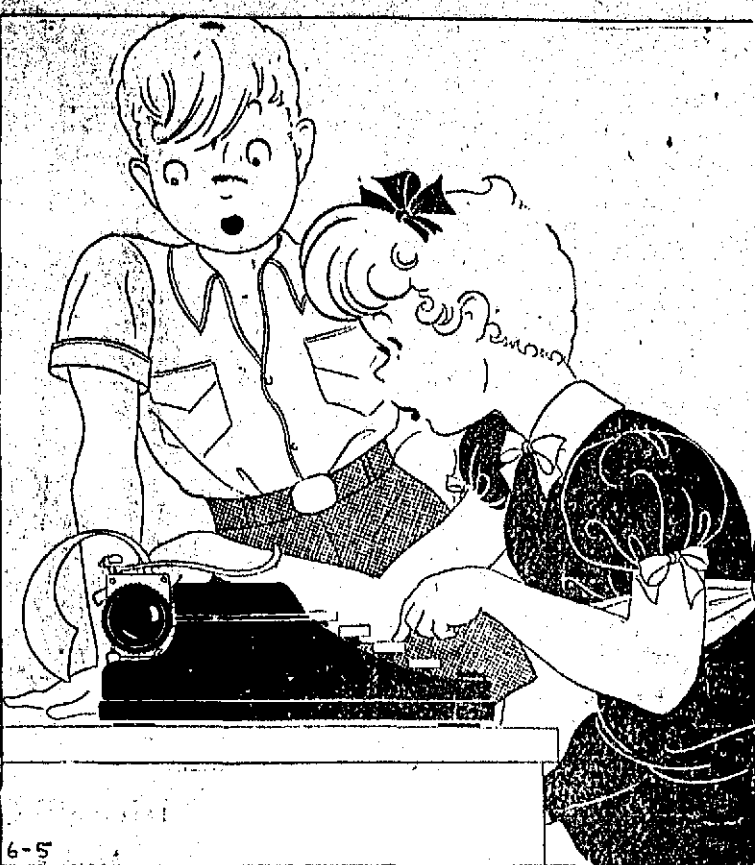

Like most of these money-spending movements, the "see-Washington-first" and "know-your-capital" drives were started by commercial enterprise, but the benefits seem to take away a lot of the curse of commercialism.

At any rate, it's a major tourist trend. I can't give you any figures on the number of children pouring in here, but I tried. The something-or-other committee of the Washington board of trade was proud to inform me that the city had a 50 per cent increase in tourist trade last year, but they don't break down the figures.

Nor do the railroads, bus companies and hotels. But all will tell you they take care of a lot of children. I sat in the office of one of the major bus companies handling local and long-distance trips and heard tours booked for high school groups from Miami, Fla., and Newark, N. J. They have handled groups from Atlanta, Kansas City, Tulsa, Okla., St. Louis, St. Paul, and several towns in Con-ticut, Massachusetts and upstate New York, to name a few.

They're Well Posted

These educational tours, according to railroad and bus officials, generally are booked by school principals who merely notify the carrier that they have 100, or 200, or whatever the number might be, of youngsters who want to make the trip to Washington for three or five days, or a week.

The itinerary is discussed, the rates made and the tour is on.

Book a room in one of the Washington hotels some night on a floor with a bunch of these wild Indians, if you enjoy a night without sleep. But if you are lucky enough to get in on their conversation, it may be a revelation, the way they gulp down their history and culture.

"Whaddya know about that mast of the Battleship Maine being right out there in Arlington cemetery?"

"Didja hear the guy say those guards walk day and night, summer and winter, heat and storm, at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier?"

"How could there have been anything big happening in the senate—why there wasn't more than a handful of those guys there?"

"Say, wasn't that the Whispering Gallery in the Hall of Statuary swell? And that used to be the House of Representatives. How you suppose a guy ever got a speech made when he had to listen to himself?" . . . "Boy, did I get a kick out of seeing the 'Spirit of St. Louis' in the National Museum!"

And so it goes. For a sum estimated at 40 per cent under actual tourist costs, these high school and college groups are getting a high pressure tour of Washington and its nearby historical points, generally including Mt. Vernon, Annapolis, and sometimes Monticello, Yorktown, Old Point Comfort, Fort Myers and George town.

I'm not boosting these tours. I don't really know whether they are worth the money. I'm only reporting that they are here and that there isn't a day when you have business in the Capitol, the Bureau of Engraving, the Smithsonian, or the National Zoo that you don't trip over a bevy of them from faraway cities in the north, the middle west, the deep south.

"I'll bet you think twice before leaving that wife of yours alone in the evenings."

"I'll say. First I have to think up an excuse for going out, and then I reason why she can't come with me."

The idea of buying a boat came to Birch when the war interfered with his travel plans. He has been around the world five times and has made three hunting expeditions to Asia and Africa.

"I'll Whip Lewis" Says Art Godoy

South American Writes His Own Success Story

AP Feature Service
June 20 is already a red-letter day in my life. For I truly know that will be the day on which I achieve my supreme ambition, the winning of the world's heavyweight boxing championship. I shall beat Joe Louis.
Actually, I will be beating Louis again—for I honestly think I defeated him in Madison Square Garden last February. I was bewildered and surprised when the decision went against me. One of the officials, Tom Shortell, who died a month ago, and other sports experts thought as I did, that Arturo won.

But, enough of that. I must accept that decision. This time I will make it so decisive that there shall be no doubt. How shall I do it? Friends, I should be lying to you if I said now definitely that I will knock out Louis or that I will win instead by outpointing him. That is something I cannot forecast. Who knows but that a perfectly placed and timed blow will enable me to knock out the champion?

that I shall have the opportunity to put across such a perfectly placed and timed punch. Maybe the fight will go the 15 round distance in that big Yankee Stadium. Let me rather just tell you confidently that I shall beat Louis. The method I shall adopt and the time it will take me to acquire victory will depend on such circumstances of action that I cannot predict.

Even the referee and one judge who voted against me in my first 15-round encounter with Louis admitted that the fight was virtually a draw for 10 rounds and that what ground I lost was lost in the closing rounds. I was tired.

in eight months. I had been back in the States only a few weeks from native Chile. I had hardly had time to become acclimated. And, to top it all, I developed a bad cold not many days before the fight. My temperature was 103. I had to forego several days of boxing when I needed it badly. I couldn't continue road-work to strengthen my legs. My appetite was affected. I was not at my best and that is why I tired. I was so weary in the 14th round that I just jumped around and clowned to pass away those three minutes.

Can't Punch? Phooey!
I am in perfect shape now. And that is one reason why I am punching harder and with better timing. Some say I don't punch hard enough to knock Louis. Phooey! Arturo punches well. I have hurt many men. And a knockout punch depends more on exact placement and perfect timing than on power alone.

I have never been really hurt in the ring. None of the punches that Louis or Galento or others have hit me have ever troubled me. Yes, they have hurt, but they haven't hurt enough to trouble me. I have never been knocked out. That is why I am not afraid of Louis. Most of his challengers have been beaten before they left their dressing rooms. But not Arturo. He is just another puncher and I can take his punches. Understand, I don't underestimate him. Louis is the greatest fighter I have ever met. His jab is fearful. You move this way, and it hits you. And he hits terrifically with that right. He is a great fighter. That is the reason he has been champion so long. But Arturo will beat him.

Shh! Secret!
How shall I fight him? That I cannot say. For, first, it would be giving away my battle plans. And, secondly, what if I said that I would fight him in a crouch and then I later decided not to, well that would be deceiving you and I shall not do that. How I shall fight Louis depends on how I find him in the first round or so. My manager, Al Weill, and my trainer, Whitey Binstein, and I have devised several methods of fighting

Joe. Which method we shall adopt will depend on what methods Louis employs. He doesn't know what we are going to do and we don't know what he is going to do.

The crouch that we devised for the first fight worked out well. How do we know that it will work again? I shan't go into the fight with only one barrel loaded. I shall have several barrels and all will be loaded. Arturo is honest. And I tell you that I confidently expect to beat Louis and become the next champion. Wait and see. I'll be glad to tell you that night that "I told you so."

Here Is Typical Election View in Old Mexico

This is the way Mexican elections are conducted—out in the open, at least as far as appearances go. Although 80 per cent of the people seem to favor General Almazan, nearly every one believes General Camacho will win. Under Mexican law President Lazaro Cardenas by declaring a state of national emergency can add two years to his expiring six-year term. Mexican presidents cannot succeed themselves.

WE THE WOMEN

By RUTH MILETT
Two of the prettiest cowgirls in the world and woolly New York can't ride and don't even own a horse. But they can't angle a bucking, sporting, automobile in a way that makes visitors to Jimmie Lynch's show in the Goodrich arena at the World's Fair sit up and take notice.
These machine-age cowgirls are Jacqueline Boddie of Texarkana, Tex., who is 17-going-on-18, and Betty Middleton of Brooklyn, who at 18 is beginning her fourth career.
Betty has been a secretary, has sung with an orchestra, and has been a professional model. She still takes modeling jobs on her day off from "dogging death."
She says that jumping an automobile off a ramp beats all the other jobs she has tried for lack of dullness.
Talked herself into the job.
Jacqueline can't compare dogging death with any more sedate work for this is her first job after getting out of high school. She had been "applying" for the job for years, for her uncle is the man who runs the show.
She never thought much of having girls doing stunt driving and never hired any until his ambitious niece talked him into it.
Now that he has two feminine "death dodgers" he doesn't see why he was so prejudiced before.
The girls can't explain why they love doing their far-from-routine job. But love it they do.
So much so the two of them are trying to persuade their boss to let them go on the road in a show of their own when the Fair closes this fall.
"The reason it is so much fun" they finally explained, "is because you never know what is going to happen. A wheel might come off or the car might roll over. You have to be on your toes every minute, and that is exciting. Then, too, as soon as you manage one trick, you start right in learning another. We're working on two new ones right now."

Barbed Wire Changed West

Many persons believe that barbed wire was more important than railroads in the development of the west. It sounded the death knell of the longhorn cattle, and made possible the introduction of purebred stock. It changed the vast prairies into an empire of homesteads.

The most famous Irish tune, "The Londonderry Air," was discovered in County Derry, Ireland, about a century ago.

The members of St. Mark's Episcopal church, will enjoy a picnic this evening at Robinson's lake.
Mr. and Mrs. Leo Robins went to Texarkana yesterday shopping, and on to Atlanta for the ball game.
Mrs. C. C. Nash and children, of Palestine, Texas, are here for a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Middlebrooks.

BARBS

Recalling that the fuhrer has more stand-ins than a movie star, we wonder if this is Hitler at the front we see on the picture pages, or merely one of his five or six reasonably accurate facsimiles.
The worm will turn, we are warned, but pay little heed. Worms being shaped as they are, no one will notice the difference.
Out west is reported a hail storm with stones bigger than oranges. In the west, sniffs Florida, even marbles are bigger than the oranges.
The allies are using that good old football strategy, we trust, as developed so well on the screen; that of winning the big game in the last minute of play.

There are more than 13,665 square miles of national parks in the United States—a territory larger than the total area of Belgium or the Netherlands.

Capital Comment From Congressmen

Congress Members Discuss Present War Situation

WASHINGTON — Capital comment from our colorful congressmen, Senator Connally (Texas) — "The argument of military dictators cannot be answered by sewing circles. The arguments of artillery and tanks and swarms of airplanes cannot be overwhelmed by resolutions."

It's beginning to look, Senator, as though the arguments of the most modern, military dictators cannot be overwhelmed by resolutions."

Senator Pepper (Fla.) — "In the name of the people of America, I challenge Mussolini to look into the face of America and see what American thinks of the cowardly blow he has struck. Although I cannot speak for the senate today, I will venture to prophesy to Mussolini: Let him do it if he will; let him think he will strike down civilization when it is prostrate, and I tell him that there will be a time when he will feel the sting of America's lash upon his body and he will crawl like a scoured slave to an ignominious dungeon, and spend eternity in penance for what he has done to destroy a spiritual body."

Pepper's words, Mr. Pepper, but you ought to know by now these fellows over there don't waste any time looking in the face of America before they make their decisions."

Mild Understatement

Comment, but not all from congressmen.

Mr. James A. Farley — "The hardest person in the world to discourage is the individual who thinks he knows all about political management, even without practical experience."

What's the matter, Uncle Jim, you're getting advice from some of the boys in the cracker-barrel league?"

Senator Wheeler (Mont.) — "I do not care how good a man is—how able he is—he cannot be placed in a detective service without being affected mentally, and becoming one of the snooping detective type."

I know a lot of gunshoes, Senator, who aren't going to like that a little bit, and I would be surprised if you didn't hear from a few."

C'est La Guerre

Capital comment (that's not even official)—Nearly all government department employees who have the reputation of being with the defense program probably will have to forego vacations until the situation levels off. FBI agents already have been notified that they cannot expect leaves this summer and Civil Aeronautics authority employees, working on the intensified air pilot's training courses, voluntarily have skipped some vacations.

The next big international surprise may come from Russia, the Reds being just about as perturbed as the United States by the devastating speed of the lightning war against the Allies. One government official, off the record, put it this way:

"After probably two or three years, Stalin is a Georgian—and Georgians never forget or forgive the kind of insults and threats that the Nazis directed against the Reds in their climb to power in Germany."

"The Georgian philosophy of life is 'two eyes for an eye' and the only reason Stalin threw in was sure the Nazis would overextend themselves and collapse."

Out of the West

A red-haired young whirlwind from Idaho is one of many women prominent in politics in this political season. She's Verda Barnes, vice president of the Young Democrats. She organized her county's Young Democrats in '34, and in the '36 campaign she organized Democratic literature and got the voters to the polls. She's married, has a daughter, and lives in Washington now.

Cattle, Crops

whom cash tribute was extracted are gone.

3. The haciendas have been broken up into small farms.

4. The big corporations, notably the oil companies, have had their property expropriated.

5. The vast herds of cattle which roamed the Mexican plains and upon which the revolutionaries fed no longer exist. In the old days horses were almost as thick as cattle, thus providing easily acquired mounts for the revolutionaries, but the horses also are gone.

6. With the disappearance of the haciendas, crops have become scarce and no revolutionary army of today could "live on the country."

Revolutions in the past depended principally upon three things—cattle, crops and cash—and all these three things are non-existent today.

The old revolutionaries were faced with a weak and ill-equipped Federal army. The Mexican army of today is well equipped and mobile.

The best prospect for the engineer—ing of a revolt, therefore, would be through the army. But this does not suggest a revolution of the old type. It would probably be a quick turnover over with the army proclaiming allegiance to some new leader. Thus, the most effective deterrent to a rebellion is the Mexican army.

Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, opposition candidate.

Above all, there has been instilled into the army an attitude of loyalty to the government, and not to any one general. That this attitude is growing is proved by the fact that four abortive attempts at revolution, in which one or two divisions followed a popular general into rebellion, only to find the bulk of the army loyal and the attempted revolution stamped out in a few weeks.

"Que importa?" Say Mexicans

"The people themselves are rather apathetic. I talked with many of all classes in different sections of the country as I traveled by train, bus and plane. Apparently 80 per cent of the people are for Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan as against the government. I am a Mexican, but 85 per cent of these believe Camacho will be announced the winner and 'Que importa?' (so what?)"

A Mexican business man perhaps explained the Mexican attitude best. He said, "I am 40 years old and have never voted. Why? Because, if the man I favored was backed by the government, I didn't need to vote. If I opposed the government selection, why waste time in voting?"

NEXT: How the average Mexican fares under today's revolutionary economy.

Baseball League to Split Season

Winners of Both
Halves to Have a 5
Game Playoff

South west baseball league composed of Hope, Magnolia, Okay, Lewisville, Nashville and Waldo, will have a split season with the winners of both halves playing a three out of five games series.

At the present Okay and Waldo are battling it out for first half honors with Hope and Magnolia having a slim chance to break on top.

Hope has been handicapped by not having the same lineup in any one game the first half but are expected to be strong contenders in the last half with the help of the Bruner Ivory soft ball star players.

Plans are underway to have an all-star game played here in Hope between the leading teams of the circuit at the end of the first half and an all-star team picked by the directors, managers and sport writers of southwest Arkansas League.

Hope will open the second half with a double header here Sunday June 23 when they meet the Nashville Feuchers.

The winner of the South West Arkansas league will have the right to represent this league in the state meet in Little Rock the latter part of August where there will be over 20 teams in this tournament, and the winner will represent Arkansas in the National Meet held in Denver, Col.

SERIAL STORY

AN EYE FOR A GAL BY HARRY HARRISON KROLL

COPYRIGHT, 1940, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: Hannah argues with Rossy, tries to convince him that Steve is right. It was Steve who asked on the Tollivers, Rossy leaves her, knowing that she came home to see Steve. He rushes to town, asks Judge Leverage about the land.

CHAPTER VIII

OLD Jesse Leverage blinked at Rossy McAfee. The ancient man rose and switched on the light. There was a TVA power line in Hell'n-Damnation now, lighting the world. He groped in an old secretary and came forth with a packet of yellowed papers.

He mumbled, "Seems like I made copies of all the papers, on account your pappy was a friend of mine, and I kind of had some funny notions about that deal myself." He sat down at the table again and with shaky hands untied the pack. He looked through some of them while Rossy looked through the rest.

"That's the conveyance," Leverage said, and spreading it on the table, he read it. "Um-mmm. I said again hit's still in good law. I say again hit's still in good law. This original was the handwrite of your paw, Rossy. I'd take my oath on that. It gave to your cousin Steve the land and timber on Wild Cat Ridge. Um-mmm. That was enduring of the time when your folks was having trouble with the Tollivers over that land line. Something about hogs getting over into the Tolliver crops. They was fixing to shoot it out or law it out. Let me see. Just let me s-see." He scratched his head. Finally he shook his head. He got up again and searched for something else.

Judge Jesse came back with a memo book, worn and dogeared. He leafed through it. He made a sound as he discovered a date.

"That's right. Them Tollivers was to see me about the law in that case June 10th of that there same year. I told 'em, I recollect, if they could prove their damages, they could collect. I didn't want no trouble. No more feudin', I ast 'em to be patient, and I knowed he would do the right thing about it."

"Well, I named it to your pappy soon as I seen him, and he was agreeable. He would settle out of court if they'd agree to arbitrate the dispute and get three disinterested parties to appraise the damages. Well, I thought I had it all hog-tied and ready for settlement when the next time them Tollivers appeared they was hell-bent on lawing and killing, too. I told your paw that. That was going on toward July, I recollect."

"The next thing your paw done was to come in and ast me to fix up these here papers. So the land the Tollivers mout of laid claim to become Steve's maw's—she was the boy's guardian—and right after that inside a week, I reckon, your pappy was killed in the game, and then Steve he put in his claim, and he had the papers, and all I could do was what I done—I told your mammy the land wasn't her'n, not your'n, but the Hogg's. And that's the way hit's been from that good day, son!"

Rossy made to rise. "Thankee, Uncle Jesse, I think I got what I wanted to know?"

ROSSY went out and stood in the night. He hadn't known there was sweat on his face until the cold wind touched his brow. It came to him with terrible completeness that his father had really transferred the property to protect himself, knowing by that dodge he could outplay the grasping Tollivers. They would gnash their teeth in defeat and take a reasonable settlement. Later, Rossy's father planned to take back the land. That had all been worked out between him and the Hogg's, at that time close to the family.

But no one could foresee the events of the Fourth of July, and after that, all Steve would have to do was make his claim and possess the property.

"That's what he's done! Now he thinks because I'm in college I'm going to learn too much, get too smart, and he has to timber off the stuff and sell it to clean up while he can. Afterward, in case I got it back, would could I do about it, anyhow? The dirty scoundrel! The low-down thief!"

He moved off swiftly again, and when back up the mountain, he came to the place where, after the game that day, he had knelt in the bushes, prayed as he had seen hill preachers pray, and told God he was going to kill the man who did this to his father.

He stopped there at the spot, and a sense of strangeness possessed him. He seemed to be alone, but there was the ghost of his father.

"Do I have to kill a man, after all? Not any Tolliver, but one of my own kin—Steve Hogg? Looks to me like I'm looking for the wrong eye and tooth. Not in the head of my enemy, but in my kinfolks!"

Abruptly he started away, not toward home, but toward the cabin where Steve Hogg lived.

ROSSY had not gone far before he was stopped by the sound of voices somewhere down the path from him. He knew Hannah's very well. It was one of those penetrating voices that carry a long way, and when pitched in anger go even farther. The other voice was lower, a man's. It took Rossy some while to conclude it was Steve Hogg's. Moving closer, he paused and listened.

"Well, all I got to say, Steve, is you'd better look out for Rossy, McAfee! The first thing you know he's going to find something, and then it's going to be trouble!"

"Yes, and you'd better be looking out for him, too! How come you got to go back to Lincoln? What's the idea in all that, anyhow?"

"I aim to get me an education or bust."

"An iddication! And what'll you do after you get one, in case you don't bust first?"

"Well, one thing certain, I won't marry you then, Steve!"

"Yes, and another thing certain if you got wit enough to get a college education, which I doubt, I wouldn't have you on a Christmas tree. Me, my wife's got to be ignorant!"

"It would take that kind to be fool enough to marry you!"

The two passed, while Rossy withdrew in the bushes, watching. So, after all, Hannah had been going to see Cousin Steve. It must have been important. The hunger for murder had gone out of him. But he did have to get back to Lincoln as quickly as possible and see if he could get a lawyer to tend to this land matter. It was not clear in his mind what would have to be done. But Steve could not have his land. Steve could have Hannah, but nothing else.

A LONG time before day on Monday morning he was up, had breakfast by lamplight, and rode through an icy dawn down the valley. The week-end had cheered him. He wanted to get back to college.

Yet, when he finally reached the bus station on the main highway, he found Hannah there, too.

It was their misfortune to have to take the last two empty seats, and all the way down to Lincoln campus they sparred and chewed the rag, always just ready to take a slash at each other's throats. That trip wore Rossy to the bone. He was never so glad of anything in his life as when the town loomed up, and he saw the bus station at the corner of the campus, and felt the bus slow for the stop.

Coach Hurd stepped up to meet Rossy. He nodded and grinned at Hannah. He took Rossy aside.

"I've got to see you right away, McAfee. Something's come up—something mighty important that can mean the biggest thing in your life. Come on over to the gym and I'll tell you all about it."

suspended services in Paris, starting at 2 a. m. Tuesday. Newspapers already had ceased to appear in Paris, which in peacetime has a population of nearly 3,000,000.

Some German armored advance guards were said to have penetrated to the environs of Paris, itself, in isolated raids through the French lines. But the main front was about 35 miles west and northeast of the capital.

The stream of civilians leaving the city was steadily swelling, and more and more anti-aircraft fire against planes bombing the outskirts of the city was heard. Although steadily approaching, the battle's roar still could not be heard here.

But France, besieged on two sides by Germans driving on Paris from the north and Italians entering the war on the south, proclaimed her determination to carry on the fight.

Main combats were centered in the Seine valley to the west of Paris, with the high command declaring that some German elements had crossed the Seine river at certain points.

Turkey With Allies

ISTANBUL, Turkey —(AP)— The Turkish cabinet met Monday night to consider the question of war or peace for Turkey as a result of Italy's entrance into the war today against Britain and France.

A meeting of the National Assembly and a partial mobilization which will increase greatly the 400,000 men Turkey has under arms is expected Tuesday.

And move toward an actual declaration of war in fulfillment of Turkey's mutual assistance pact with the Allies will, however, wait on developments, chiefly whether Italy's action brings the fighting to Turkey's doorstep in the eastern Mediterranean, informed quarters said.

It was asserted everywhere that Turkey would live up to her engagements undertaken last October when she agreed to go to the aid of the Allies in event of any act of war threatening the status quo in the Mediterranean.

L'romats expressed belief Turkey's entry into the war was likely, but that it would be approached by gradual steps instead of coming immediately.

All refrigerators looked alike to the newlyweds. "Give us the low-down," they asked friends. "Why did you replace yours with the one that freezes with NO MOVING PARTS?"

1 "You never hear a thing..." said Bill Jones. "Just listen... silent, isn't it? And I can tell you, as one who's had experience, that's reason enough to buy a Servel. And no noise also means no wear, too!"

2 "Only a tiny gas flame..." Ted Walsh points out. "That's all it takes to do the work. Servel hasn't a single moving part in its freezing system. That's why you can depend on it to stay quiet, efficient and economical."

3 "My bills are lower..." said Mrs. Smith. "Food keeps much longer. And with no moving, wearing parts to run up the cost, Servel's operating cost will stay low always."

4 "And such conveniences... You can store what you want, where you want it, keep it as you like it. You can have moist cold or dry cold, whichever you prefer. And there are lots of other features you'll love!"

5 "Make yours a Servel!" That was everybody's advice, and—since the newlyweds took it—it's their tip to you. Why not run down to your Servel dealer's right now... and see the beautiful new 1940 models they have on the floor? You will be delighted at the spacious roominess, the glistening finish inside and out, the new conveniences. But best of all... you'll want the gas refrigerator for your home because its freezing system has no moving parts!

Monroe Doctrine False, He Asserts

U. S. Officer Cites It as Our Propaganda Effort

LITTLE ROCK — The Monroe Doctrine was designed as a document of propaganda, designed solely for the benefit of the United States, by Gen. Col. Frank R. Allen, Engineer Reserve, before the Military Order of the World War meeting at the Women's City Club Monday night.

He said the doctrine originally was formulated by President James Monroe as a "face-saving" gesture after England and France previously had given Latin and South American nations the guarantees contained in the document.

Colonel Allen is director of research and statistics for the Unemployment Compensation Division and a member of the Engineers Corps Reserve.

The doctrine, he said, "is an instrument of force, based on the proposition of force. It is a proposition of war. It says you stay out of here or we will put you out. If we had kept our noses out of other people's business, we might have been all right."

Declaring he was not voicing his own opinions but reiterating those of recognized authorities, Colonel Allen said the original conception of the Monroe Doctrine died when the United States expanded industrially, and sought foreign markets. "When we thought we were going to lose some money, the Monroe Doctrine was forgotten," he said.

The Spanish-American war, he said, was not fought in defense of the doctrine. "We sent the battleship Maine to Havana on a goodwill trip. A mysterious explosion sank it. No one knows what caused the explosion. For 18 months previous, the sugar interests had flooded the United States with atrocious stories about the Spanish."

He said for 30 years previous the other Americans had attempted to secure an interpretation of the Monroe Doctrine. "They got it with the end of the Spanish war," he said.

The "era of the big stick," inaugurated by Theodore Roosevelt, was a threat to police all of Latin and South America, he said. Acquisition of the Panama Canal Zone was accomplished with the aid of a revolution which had Panama from Colombia. Four months after Colombia refused to give the United States a right to build the canal, Panama revolted, he said. "Colombian troops which tried to land in Panama were stopped by a United States battleship. Within four days the Panama government was recognized, a diplomatic record, and the canal site secured."

He said the era of "dollar diplomacy" followed, during which the United States sent troops to several countries to protect American interests. When the Americans started trading more Germany, the "good neighbor policy" was started. The trouble with the program, he said, was that "we have no friendly neighbors left."

THE FORGOTTEN LESSONS

HARRISON IN HOLLYWOOD

By PAUL HARRISON, NEA Service Correspondent

At 6 (?), Ann Todd Looks Like Shirley Temple's Successor, but She Doesn't Look Like Shirley

HOLLYWOOD — Ever since Shirley Temple packed up her dolls, picture looks and $300,000 bonus check and cut out of 20th-Fox agents and studios have been clamoring at the studio gate with a frilled assortment of substitute Wonder Tots and Miracle Moppets, most of them made up to look as much as possible like the original.

But the company wasn't having any luck. It went out and hired Ann Todd from under the noses of the Warner brothers. Darryl Zanuck and his aides didn't want anyone who looked like Shirley. Ann has dark, drawn eyes and long, straight auburn hair. She can sing a little, but does not dance. She is acknowledged by all Hollywood as a first-rate actress.

The studio isn't making any announcements or claims for its Temple successor, Story properties which were bought or created for Shirley are being studied as vehicles for Ann Todd.

She played Leslie Howard's daughter in "Intermezzo" and Edward Robinson's daughter in "Dr. Ehrlich."

"Lately she has been working in 'All This and Heaven Too' with Bette Davis," Mrs. Mayfield said. "Warners had optioned her for another picture, with Merle Oberon, but it was postponed. So while she was still working there, we accepted this contract with Fox."

Ann was signed on April 15 and began work that day as Tyrone Power's little sister in "Brigham Young." No future pictures have been announced, but it's guessed that she'll play two or three more progressively important roles before being tried in a lead.

Raise Turkeys in Screened Houses

Flies Discovered to Spread Disease Among Turkeys

AP Feature Service

BLACKSBURG, Va. — Turkeys that live in screened houses don't draw flies.

For that reason, Dr. E. P. Johnson of the Virginia Agricultural Experiment Station believes, commercial turkey producers eventually may raise practically all their flocks in confinement to eliminate losses from parasitic diseases, to which the birds are highly susceptible. Infectious diseases of turkeys frequently are spread by bloodsucking insects and even common flies.

"Successful control or prevention of parasitic diseases of turkeys has not been accomplished by the conventional methods of periodic rotation of yards or ranges," the animal pathologist points out.

Dr. Johnson recently concluded a three-year experiment undertaken as part of a study of a blood disease of turkeys, spread by the blackfly, which causes losses as high as 50 per cent in some Virginia flocks. The indoor method of raising turkeys, which he evolved "is not only effective in preventing this blood protozoan disease, but also will prevent practically all the parasitic infestations common to turkeys—blackhead, coccidiosis, gape worms, roundworms and tapeworms."

The principal difficulty encountered was the tendency among the confinement-raised birds toward the trouble known as hock disease, perosis or slipped tendons. This was corrected by increasing the quantity of cod liver oil and manganese in the feed. Deaths and injuries from fighting among the flocks was reduced by clipping off about half an inch of the upper beak.

The type of shelter recommended by Dr. Johnson is of frame construction, with a floor of one by four inch 1-gauge galvanized and electrically welded wire, two feet above the ground, and a galvanized sheet iron coated with aluminum paint to reflect some of the sun's heat. A single thickness of unbleached cheesecloth, 23 by 24 strands-per-inch weave, fastened to the studs with wood lathes, is all that is necessary to keep out the flies. An enclosure of chicken wire, inside the studs, keeps the turkeys from pecking holes in the cloth.

War Relief to Be Tremendous Task

Famine Staring Most of Europe in the Face Today

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — While 50 per cent of America and 99 per cent of those in Washington are talking war and defense, the departments of commerce and agriculture are trying to get ready to discuss, at least, one of the biggest questions that arises during warfare: "What about relief?"

Before this problem can even be approached, another question must be asked and answered: How far can A. Litter go in feeding his captive peoples?

The only answer you'll get around here is, "Not very far." In the first place, it's axiomatic that where war breaks out, famine follows. Industry and agriculture become paralyzed and what there is turned into keeping the conquering armies conquering.

This war—or the total phase of it—before Belgium, Dutch and French households had a chance to start their vast home industry of knitting. The grain was not ready to harvest. There is scant reason to believe that these peoples will fare as well as they did in the months and years following August, 1914.

And here's what happened after that fateful month. In the next ten years, approximately five and a half billion dollars was spent on world relief as a result of war. In Belgium alone, Herbert Hoover's relief commission—the most amazing charity organization that ever arose out of a holocaust—spent nearly one billion dollars feeding 10,000,000 people for four and a half years.

Mr. Hoover and his aides got permission of the British to run the blockade; got an agreement from the Germans not to interfere with relief food and clothing, set up 5,000 committees in the conquered territory and 2,000 more scattered over the world as procurement groups.

Even if the Nazis could show the same genius for reconstruction in the lands they have taken over as they have for blitzkrieg, the problem still is one that may have the Americans gasping before the world can be righted.

Russian Famine Rumored

Into the hat from which they must draw the answer, government officials are tossing these factors:

1. France, which couldn't take care of a comparative handful of Spanish refugees BEFORE the war started, now is overrun with more than 5,000,000 homeless, hungry people.
2. Spain is unable to help.
3. All of the Balkan surpluses are being absorbed to feed the armies.
4. It's rumored now that Russia is faced with another famine.
5. England, though its reserves are

There still remains a large number of 1938 personal taxes unpaid in this county, which it is my duty to collect. I have tried to be just as fair and considerate with everyone as possible while in office and expect to continue to do so.

The records show that about 85% of these unpaid taxes are due from people who own automobiles and have children in school, and the majority of them want better schools and roads; provided the other person pays the bill. It is not fair to the man or woman who pays taxes to keep these institutions going while other persons receive the same benefit and pay no taxes at all.

If every citizen in Hempstead county should stop paying his personal taxes, then what do you think would happen to the schools and other institutions that go to build a good government?

As I have stated above — I want to be fair, but these taxes must be paid.

Within the next few days I expect to send my deputy to every person who has not paid his 1938 personal taxes with the proper authority to collect. If you want to save all of the extra expense incurred in this collection, please come in and attend to it at once.

Yours very respectfully,
